BREEZY BITS FROM THE GOLDEN WEST

Strong, Colorado, P. O. box 6. June 16, 1919. Editor Hartford Herald, Hartford, Ky.

Dear Sir: Thought I would write a few lines for the benefit of the many friends back home that would be glad to hear from me, and to know what part of the country I am in. I am in Huerfano County, south western part of the state. Strong is a small mining town, of about five hundred population, situated in the Rocky mountain region. Wasenburg is the nearest Railroad Depot, about thirteen miles from here. I am close to several different mountain ranges. They are the Spanish Peaks, Greenhorn, Big Sheep, Stranger and Pike Peak, most of them are covered with snow, that is the tops and near the tops. The slopes and near the bottom are covered with pine timber and all kinds of wild flowers.

There are lots of black Bears, Deers, Wildcats and Koyotes to be found on all these mountains. The Altitude here is 9000 feet above sea level. The climate is fine. The air is light and dry. The wind blows all the time and most of the time hard. We have no dew and very little rain, we have had only one little shower in the last two months. We had quite a snow storm the first of this month, it began snowing on the night of the first and snowed two days and nights hard, but it melted most as fast as it fell. There are people here from nearly every state in the union, most of them came for the benefit of their health, (so did I). Mining and stock raising are the principal industries of this part. Gold, Silver, Copper and Coal are the leading minerals.

What is the matter with your Cool Springs and McHenry correspondent? I scarcely ever see a letter from them. I hope they will get busy and send their letters in every week. I always look for them first as they are from my old stomping ground. I also appreciate Mr. Guy Ranney's letters very much. I am not a subscriber to the Herald myself but my boarding master is and we feel quite lost without it.

Respectfully,
GEORGE CROWBARGER.

Mrs. O. P. Brunton Succumbs After Short Illness.

Mrs. O. P. Brunton died at six thirty Friday evening, June twentieth, 1919, at her residence, 1822 Eastern Parkway Louisville. She suffered two strokes of paralysis in February and was moved from Beaver Dam early in March to the Leaconess Hospital, in Louisville for treatment. To this union were born four children. Mrs. J. L. Lallinger, Mrs. W. E. Travis, of Louisville; G. W. Brunton, of Beaver Dam; and Sally Gray Brunton who died at the age of three years. EDITOR OF REPUBLICAN GOES TO OWENSBORO

Mr. J. H. Thomas, who has been editor of the Hartford Republican for several years and has been writing for that paper for many years, has resigned his position and gone to Owensboro to become city editor on the Owensboro Messenger.

Mr. Thomas is one of the best newspaper men in Kentucky and though we are sorry he is leaving Hartford, we congratulate the Messenger on being able to secure his services. Though he has had broad experience in all lines of newspaper work, he is essentially an editor and news writer. He has an instinct for news and discernment that is marvelous. His power of selection in choosing matter that is of general interest aids him greatly in producing a pleasing story always suited to the readers taste no matter how fastidious he may be. His editorials are always virile and terse and his use of sarcasm occasionally drives home a point with greatest emphasis than milder forms could accomplish. He has an extensive vocabulary and his flow of English is at times eloquent, at times chatty, at times humorous, but always smooth and compelling. He has a natural wit which makes him especially pleasing as a paragrapher.

As a friend and citizen we have always found him to be a gentleman in the fullest sense of the word. Politeness is a part of his nature and we have found him to be always fair in all his dealings, strong in his beliefs but ever tolerant of others. We have been contemporary with him for over a year and during this time we have felt the warmest personal friendship for him which makes us wish him well in his new endeavors. May success and prosperity attend him.

THE VENEER OF THE YEARS

BY WALTER GREEP.

CHAPTER XV

THE COATING DEEPENS

In a country village time flies rapidly. Of course the same days are counted on the calendar as in a metropolis; the same holidays are observed, the same festivities and celebrations take place, but in the city so many events are crowded in the short space between Christmas, that it really seems a decade from one to the other. But in the country it is different. Years flow on in unchanging and monotonous succession. Days rise from the east, spread their golden wings falter and faint and fall, beyond the western mountains; nothing unusual, nothing above the commonplace happens; no great exertion is required, none is put forward. Little of the world's evil is borne upon the fresh rural air. Life is one long simple innocent dream, idyllic and pure, narrow yet joyous.

And of all sleepy little towns, Devondale was the sleepiest. It seemed that her few inhabitants were oblivious of the existence of a world beyond the borders of the neighborhood. Most of them had been born in Devondale and expected to die there. Few had ever been farther away than the County seat, which was about twenty miles distant. The news they read in their county paper, and a few, and very few were subscribers to the Louisville Courier-Journal. Magazines were an unknown commodity, and any book, no matter how popular at the time of publication, was usually about two years of age when it reached Devondale. The chief occupation of the citizens in summer was to loiter on the benches in the shade of the oaks that bordered the principal streets and, when they were not asleep, discuss politics, religion and the last year's crops. The whole place seemed invested with such spirit of languor that the townspeople were, to quote one of their sages, "To turn lazy to take a sack of gold if you were to hand it to them." They would just say, "stuff it down in my pocket there" (yawn or two.) But still it was surprising to see the amount of interest manifested in local affairs and their wild craving for local praise. Never a party was given but the attendance was the entire youthful population, and men strove for the honor of the petty positions that the little village afforded. The Sunday school superintendent was a choice personage, capable of deep respect, and the choir master was a prince of the very elect. And in no less degree was the favorite young lady of the town, made important; if she happened to be a belle or leader in their "Society Circle," she was petted and fêted by the other young ladies in a manner most astounding. For Devondale, like hundreds of other small towns, had its "Imitation Society" and the way its members managed themselves would have put to shame the larger circle of people who engage in such rank stupidity.

A few months after the affair at the Christmas tree, war was officially and publicly declared by both Samantha and Cora. A rivalry sprang up between them, which should be the local belle and reign supreme in the heart of Oscar. That was the question. It could not be denied, that of the two Samantha was the prettier and much more popular among the old folks; but on the other hand her devotion to Oscar and her parents hostility to social gatherings had robbed her of much prestige among the younger people. Cora however, was extremely genial with all her friends and though she showed a special fondness for Oscar, she did not let this endanger her standing with the others. Of the two, one would have branded her as the better diplomat of local affairs, for she soon had Samantha out classed and was the belle of the circle.

Samantha and Oscar, however, by this time had made up again as lovers quarrels are of short duration and always succeeded in bringing the lovers closer together in the end, so they renewed again their relations with, what we would call superfluous endearments. They had met in a little valley between Devondale and her home, and she had tried to pass him by coldly, but nothing like this could go with Oscar, when she tried to pass him by calmly stepped in her way and said in the sweetest, softest voice possible, "Hello Samantha." That was enough. In an instant she was holding his big rough hand in both hers and caressing it with all the tenderness she could muster. He in turn was murmuring love words and when his vocabulary was exhausted, he kissed her. She promised to meet him at the mill for a secret consultation, the next evening, and after they had parted she went up the hill to her home with a light heart and a singing spirit.

The next morning she made it seem very necessary for her to visit cousin Katy up at Devondale, and that evening she did not return home till late. It was a balmy evening; a soft wind fanned the treetops gently, and the sun, a huge golden ball dropped slowly and almost imperceptibly down the west. As she walked toward the Mill, where in the shade of the oaks, Oscar was waiting for her, she felt her soul thrill with a sense of rapture and infinite happiness. It was an ideal time for love making, this soft spring evening; the world was all in tune, much vibrant string playing lone its individual melody.

On the projecting roof of a great oak, and leaning against the trunk, Oscar sat waiting. He rose when he saw her coming.

"So you have come, alright I see," he said with a little laugh.

"Yes, of course I came, you never knew me to story to you, did you, and I see you are here too."

"I shore am, and you never knowed me to lie either, did you?" "No—I think not, and what was it you wanted to tell me so badly this evening?" she asked softly.

"Oh yes, it was a little business I wanted to see you about, just wait a minute." She watched him closely as he took from his vest pocket a small paper box, and opening it removed a small ring, the diamond set sparkling in the sunlight.

"How would you like to wear that," he asked, holding it up for her to view it.

"Oh," she replied enthusiastically, "I would just love to."

"I mean," he continued, "how would you like to wear it as an engagement ring? Why won't you promise me that you will be my wife?"

She hesitated to answer, "Oh Oscar," she said at last. "That is a difficult question. What is the use of such haste?"

"You intend to marry me some time don't you?" he asked looking straight into her eyes. "If you don't you ought to stop me from going around with you and stop jumpin' on me ever time I go with any other girls. I tell you people are talkin' about me and you. They're sayin' we ought to either get married or quit being so lovin'."

"Oh really, Oscar, have they said that?" she cried in dismay.

"They have, and more than that, I ain't goin to tell you about. I tell you they are beginning to talk right sharply. If you are engaged to me, though, and wearing my ring it won't make no difference. What d'ye say must I put it on your finger?"

"Under the circumstances," she answered humbly, "I guess it is about the only thing we can do to stop the gossips tongues."

She held out her hand while he slowly slipped the ring on the slender finger.

"Now that's fine," he said, "what time shall we set for the wedding?"

"Make it indefinite," she answered a far away gleam in her eyes as she thought of some one else to whom she had pledged fidelity.

"And what does indefinite mean?"

"It means, I will let you know when I am ready for the wedding; until then you must wait patiently."

"Alright you're the boss," he said laughingly; "Well I must go, Goodbye." And he turned and walked away in the direction of Devondale.

As she slowly traced her steps up the hill to her home she was conscious of a feeling of regret that she had so easily yielded to the wishes of Oscar. She glanced at the ring on her finger and somehow wished it was not there. It seemed to bind her to a false illusion. She was beginning to suspicion that she really did not love Oscar. Perhaps after all her liking for him was momentary and not that eternal and immortal passion that can come only once in a life. The evening was suggestive of another to her, now far away and dim, and the sweet breath of lilacs that came to her brought back a flood of memories. By this very gate a year ago, with that same odor filling the air with balm, she had told Merlin goodbye and sworn she would be true; and now, only twelve months later she stood there, false to her promise, plighted to another. Ah! how many things can happen in one brief year.

Her father came through the gate just as she was entering and noticing the ring, he asked, "Samantha, where did you get that beautiful ring?"

"It is Cora Smith's, she lied to him, 'She decided to wear my ring and let me wear hers.'"

"Aha! I thought you and Cora were not very good friends."

She smiled, "Oh we made it all right," she answered.

"I am glad you did, it is not very becoming to two girls to be always quarrelling. Now you best hurry on to the house, I heard your mother asking for you a moment ago." He patted her brown head tenderly as she slipped past him and hurried up the path to the house.

In a few days her engagement to Oscar was generally known, at least among the younger people of the town, but as they had pledged themselves not to tell, it was kept a secret from her parents. She now began to take a more active part in the social life of the place, and being the acknowledged belle, soon regained her former popularity. Cora, being so easily beaten by her rival, withdrew into the background and remained there.

Days lapsed into months, months into years, and still no wedding took place. One, two, three, four, the clock of time truck of the years, since Merlin went away and still not a line had she received from him nor had anyone else; no trace of him had been found. Devondale had almost forgot him and his name was only a memory. But Samantha could not forget. Although she was the fiancée of another, yet his parting words seemed to ring louder and louder in her ears, and though the days ebbed and flowed about her, these words did not faint. Often Oscar begged her to consent to wed him at once, but she put him off a little longer, each time—she knew not why—and so the years went by.

Freshie—I don't feel well this morning.

Soph—Where do you feel the worst?

Freshie—In school.

"John," said the new judge, "I have known you for years. I am sorry that my first duty is to try you for being drunk. What was your reason, if any, for getting drunk?"

"To celebrate your election, judge."

"I thought you told me you were going to break up housekeeping."

"We did intend to, but the cook refused to leave."

"He calls her his 'queen of the links.'"

"Ah! Their courtship began on a golf course, I presume?"

"Far otherwise. She used to sell him bologan in a delicatessen store when he kept a bachelor's hall."

When Mrs. Langtry was at the summit of her beauty and fame she met at a dinner an African king who was visiting London. She did her best to please the dusky monarch and evidently succeeded, for he said as they parted: "Ah, madam, if heaven had only made you black and fat you would be irresistible."

"And when you told him I was married," said the girl who had jilted him, "did he seem to be sorry?"

"Yes," replied the other, "he said he was very sorry—although he didn't know the man personally."

It was customary for the congregation to repeat the 23rd Psalm in unison, and Mrs. Armstrong's notion of joining was to keep about a dozen words ahead all the way through.

A stranger was asking one day about Mrs. Armstrong. "Who," he inquired, "was the lady who was already by the still waters while the rest of us were lying down in green pastures?"

Sam, a colored character, was about to be tried on the time-honored of chicken stealing. After the charge had been stated the judge turned to the prisoner and said: "Sam, you may have your choice between having your case tried by me, or by a jury of your peers."

"What's peers?" asked Sam.

"Peers, Sam, are your equals, men of your own class or situation. You all jest try dis case yourself," said Sam. "I ain't gonna be tried by no chicken thieves."

An officer on board a warship was drilling his men.

"I want every man to lie on his back, put his legs in the air, and move them as if he were riding a bicycle," he explained. "Now, commence."

After a short effort one of the men stopped.

"Why have you stopped, Murphy?" asked the officer.

"If ye please, sir," was the answer. "O'm coastin'."

While his mother was away on a visit Johnny didn't say his prayers. Upon his mother's return there was a reckoning.

"Why didn't you say your prayers, John?"

"Well, you see, it was this way, ma: I forgot to say them the first night an' nothin' happened. 'N' then I didn't say them the next night an' nothin' happened, 'n' so I decided I wouldn't ever say 'em again if nothin' never happened."

And then something happened.

"Say, that lot you sold me is three feet under the water."

"Is it?"

"Yes, it is, and you know it is."

"Well, it's a good thing you told me. I can let you have a bargain in a canoe."

"I don't like your heart action," the doctor said, applying the stethoscope again. "You have had some trouble with angina pectoris."

"You're partly right, doctor," said the young man, sheepishly, "only that ain't her name."

"I see you are wearing that extraordinary necktie your wife gave you for Christmas."

"Of course, I am," replied Mr. Meekton. "The reason she bought it for me was to show her authority."

Lady—What is your aim in life, my good woman?

Good Woman—Me 'usband, generally.

THE ARGONNE TODAY AND ITS REMINDERS

The route of the last battle of the Argonne from Grand Pre to the heights of Cote de Chatillon, is much as it was on the day the guns were stilled, save that the dead no longer lie in the field. Abandoned equipment and field pieces are still there, with slender vines beginning to crawl over them as if to explore this queer device of mortals and everywhere there is the wire, its barbed tendrils dragging along the ground or sticking stiffly in the air, creaking and swaying in the wind, like the groping tentacles of some spidery monster seeking prey. Remnants of the old war days, there.

And the trees, poor wrecks of their former selves, their green arms that shot upwards to the sun gone. Only charred stumps remain. This the beautiful forest of the Argonne, silent with the quiet of the tomb today, where once pandemonium shrieked. The old German dugouts are emptied of their boastful tenantry. A rifle with fixed bayonet, rusty now and harmless, leans against a sodden wall, and there is a litter of things, dented mess kits, torn clothing soaked with rain, empty bottles, soldiers' belts that proclaim their wearers "Furchtlos und Treu," and rusty buttons that shout: "Gott mit uns!"

And silence, awful and penetrating, fills the Argonne forest. Not even a bird call nor the rattle of a stone, dislodged by a footfall, nor the murmur of water. Even the wind makes no sound, for there are no leaves to resist its passage. There is a great shell hole filled with stagnant rain.

LETTER FROM ROAD COMMISSIONER

To County Judges, County Attorneys and Magistrates

Dear Sir:

I desire again to call your attention to the fact that your county has an insufficient amount of money for road purposes and I would suggest that your court authorize as election on the 20c Road Tax at the August Primary. At that time it would cost practically nothing and if it failed to carry the people would talk about the proposition, and by so doing would get better informed as to your needs.

The following counties have voted the 20c Road Tax:

Fulton, Livingston, Muhlenburg, Breckenridge, Cumberland, Letcher, Clark, Grant, Henry, Washington, Larue, Carlisle, Henderson, Butler, Meade, McCreary, Owsley, Fayette, Carroll, Shelby, Marion, Franklin, Webster, Hopkins, Hancock, Perry, Martin, Pike, Scott, Owen, Mercer, Nelson, Wolfe, Estill and Union.

It is necessary that the election be advertised for 30 days prior to holding the election, and I hope that at your next meeting the election will be called.

Yours very truly,

R. WILEY, Commissioner.

"There goes a chap who started on a shoestring and now he's independently rich."

"He must be a man of great business ability."

"Not particularly. He married money. The dainty boot of an heiress came unlaced one day and he was Johnny-on-the-spot."

HARTFORD EVIDENCE FOR HARTFORD PEOPLE

The Statements of Hartford Residents Are Surely More Reliable Than Those of Utter Strangers

Home testimony is real proof. Public statements of Hartford people carry real weight.

What a friend or neighbor says compels respect.

The word of one whose home is far away invites your doubts.

Here's a Hartford man's statement.

And it's for Hartford people's benefit.

Such evidence is convincing.

That's the kind of proof that backs Doan's Kidney Pills.

J. A. Baird, R. F. D. No. 5, Hartford, Ky., says: "I used only one box of Doan's Kidney Pills, but that was all I needed to cure me of kidney weakness. For some time I had been troubled by sharp twinges across my loins and other symptoms of kidney complaint. As I heard Doan's Kidney Pills being highly recommended, I got a supply and their use cured me. I can recommend this remedy."

Price 50c at all dealers. Don't simply ask for kidney remedy—get Doan's.

A Boy Can Run a John Deere Dain Mower

While you are getting things in shape for making hay, put your boy on the John Deere Mower and let him do the cutting—he will do it just as well and just as easily as you can do it.

Because of the powerful lift, he can easily raise the cutter bar to pass over any field obstruction or to extreme height, when necessary. A foot lever, working in conjunction with the hand lever, makes the lift simple and easy.

He will never have to back up to get a start, even in the heaviest hay. The knife starts cutting the instant the mower is thrown in gear—no lost motion.

You will see big advantages in the drive on this machine—it's extremely simple—the gears are so placed that one set holds the other set in mesh constantly. The John Deere will cut all of the grass for years to come—a simple adjustment takes up all lag in the cutter bar, without affecting the centering of the knife. If the knife ever needs re-centering, a special adjustment is provided.

The John Deere is the simplest, most powerful and best-built mower we have ever seen. We know it will appeal to you.

Come in—it's to your advantage, to know all about this mower before you buy. While at our store, we want you to see the rest of our line of haying and harvesting machinery. We have a line of machines you can use with satisfaction and profit.

We wonder what McAdoo is a-doing, as we haven't heard from him for some time.

The senators seem to think that the salient characteristics of a successful senator 's being able to cuss the president and draw his salary.

Don't forget that the Salvation army campaign is on hand. Go down into your pockets for the ones who went down into the trenches for your son.

An Ohio County boy, Captain Douglas Felix, was recently made a Major. This is quite a compliment to the county and to the young man, he being but twenty-seven years of age and having been in the service but two years.

Instead of wanting to become president and exploit their political might, most of the returned soldiers are content to leave that to practicing politicians and go about their humbler ways, geeding Beck and hoeing potatoes

Those who criticize the operators of either the Home or Cumberland exchanges will not get any sympathy from The Herald. These operators have both the courtesy of Chesterfield and the patience of Job—and we know from experience.

The only place where there seems to be any serious sentiment against the League of Nations is in the American senate, says a Paris correspondent. Perhaps the reason is, that is the only place where they will allow partisan politics to override common sense.

The house of the county poor farm is badly needing a coat of paint and the orchard and lawns need the touch of a mower also. This should be looked after as it will make the place more inviting and make more pleasant the habitation of the county's unfortunates.

We wonder why the Republicans have ceased boosting Chicago as "the out post for listening" since it was swamped by the German vote and Bill Thompson elected on the Republican ticket, against the will of loyal Republican voters, and evoking the scorn of all loyal Americans everywhere.

We would like to pat the Memphis Commercial Appeal on the back for their advocacy of a better paid ministry. Of course our wee small voice would not be heard very far but when a paper like the Commercial Appeal takes up the matter the churches will have to take notice.

The American regular army is like the old cow's tail with which she fans the flies away. She uses her horns for bigger game. The regulars will take care of the small fry that may pop themselves up against us but will reserve the great trained manhood of the nation for the larger nations which may grow warlike and need a spanking.

Contrary to the Mexican's expectations, the United States did not send any notes when Villa's bandetta fired across the Border. Instead they sent cavalrymen. Your Uncle Samuel has had a considerable change of heart during his scrap with the Hehniees—he will stand no monkey-business now from those little Bob-cat nations that have been pestering him.

Of all the human traits jealousy is the lowest and the vilest. It has wrecked more homes and broken more hearts than all others of the human attributes combined. And the sad part of it all is, that much of it is undeserved, being the result of suspicion and low thoughts. Though Shakespeare makes one of his characters prove that jealousy is a proof of love, it often destroys the very thing that gives it being. A love that cannot overcome the sting of false jealousy will not stand the test of fire.

We are a little surprised at the apathy manifested out in the county in regard to the proposed highways which will cross the county in at least two ways. Some farmers imagine that these roads will benefit only Hartford, while as a matter of fact Hartford will get less benefit than the county because of the volume of trade that will naturally go to Owensboro and Bowling Green when highways are thrown open to these points.

We are not advocates of universal military training but we do believe that the incorporation of a course of training into the curriculum of our public schools would make a decided improvement in the physique of the coming generation. Besides the young men would be taught habits of cleanliness, discipline and obedience to orders, which would be invaluable to them all through life.

Ohio County is without doubt the coming county of western Kentucky. Her natural resources have scarcely been touched and her farm lands, rich as a crow ever flew over, can be had for half the price that Daviess county land of the same variety commands. As soon as the highways are built across the county we predict a great advance in the price of farm land and a scramble of out-of-the-county buyers to obtain same.

County Farm Agent M. L. McCracken is rendering a real service to the farmers of the county. Though he has been here only a short time he has gone almost all over the county and became acquainted with a great number of farmers. He has assisted in the selling of the woolpool and has become very useful in inoculating hogs, etc. If the farmers will consult him, they will find him always at their service and ready to render aid whenever he is needed.

We regret to see our neighbor, Editor Thomas, leave Hartford. Since we have known him we have learned to like Mr. Thomas with that fraternal affection which exists only among the sorrowful sojourners of the newspaper craft. Though we have had our tiffs there has been nothing personal about it and we have only the greatest respect and friendly regard for the departing editor. We wish him the best of success in his new field.

There is one feature about Kentucky that we fear is not appreciated by Kentuckians, especially unless they have traveled in other states. That is the profusion of foliage and forage in this state. In no other section that we have visited have we found the splendid grasses and wildflowers that grow in Kentucky. No prettier picture could be imagined than a Kentucky landscape in summer—the grassy hills, the vine-matted fences with honeysuckles topping over the palings, the green woodlands and Kentucky's superb grades of livestock grazing beside the silvery streams that wind through the vales. The average Kentucky landscape rivals the famed valley of "Rasselas" in pastoral simplicity. And few of us realize that Green River, which forms the southern boundary of our county, has been pronounced the most beautiful pastoral river in the world, a painting of which hangs in the landscape gallery in London.

Catarhal Deafness Cannot Be Cured
by local application, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure catarrhal deafness, and that is by a constitutional remedy. Catarrhal deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation can be reduced and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Many cases of deafness are caused by catarrh, which is an inflamed condition of the mucous surface. Hall's Catarrh Medicine acts thru the blood on the mucous surface of the system.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Catarrhal Deafness that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Medicine. Circulars free. All Druggists, 75c.

THE TAX LAWS

Chief Justice Carroll's Proposed Amendment—An Increase in Revenue and No Increase in Taxes

Chief Justice John D. Carroll's plan of taxation is to exempt lands and town lots from all state taxes. Counties will not be required to assume any obligation now taken care of by the state. The state will have as much or more money as it now has and will use it for the same purpose that it is now used.

$5,000,000 will be taken off of real estate and $4,500,000 will be collected annually by the state in the place of it from other sources, as follows:

1. Franchise tax-paying corporations, banks and trust companies, will pay all taxes except for graded schools and municipalities to the state, but the total taxes paid on this property shall be not more than is now paid. The additional revenue from this source will be not less than $2,000,000.
2. All intangible personal property will be assessed. Not less than $1,000,000 additional will be collected from this source.
3. The state will save more than $300,000 which is now paid for assessing and collecting taxes on real estate.
4. An adequate system for collecting inheritance taxes will enable the state to collect not less than $400,000 additional.
5. By a revision of the license tax laws, more than $300,000 additional can be collected.
6. Elimination of useless expenses for salaries and other purposes will save the state not less than $500,000.

FROM CHERRY-BLOSSOM LAND

The Japanese Give Good Example

It is a proverb of Cherry Blossom Land that beauty of face and figure depend on womanly health.

What is it that makes our American women often pale, sallow-faced, with dark circles under the eyes, and very often old at forty-five when they should be in their prime?

Women suffer in girlhood from backache, spine-ache and headaches, followed by irregularities and as a result diseases of the womanly organs are more common than any one but a physician in active practice could suppose.

After long experience in the treatment of women's diseases, Dr. Pierce evolved a vegetable tonic and corrective which he called Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. This is a purely vegetable preparation, without a particle of alcohol contained in it.

When a woman complains of backache, dizziness or pain—when everything looks black before her eyes—a dragging feeling, or bearing-down, with nervousness, she should turn to this "temperance" herbal tonic. It can be obtained in almost every drug store in the land and the ingredients are printed in plain English on the wrapper. Put up in tablets or liquid. Dr. Pierce, of Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., will send a trial size of the tablets for ten cents.

MARY PICKFORD

in the greatest triumph of her entire career. The most beautiful play in the world,

"Daddy Long Legs."

There is not a more pleasing picture on the screen.

Through much of the film Mary Pickford is just what her thousands of admirers want her to be a delightfully appealing little girl entering into the petty but very real tragedies of the poor little waifs herded together under the supervision of the stern matron of an asylum.

Humor and pathos are so intermingled in this production that you scarcely know where one leaves off and the other begins.

Daddy Long Legs strikes straight and true at the emotions because it is a faithful portrayal of life in some of its most sympathetic phases.

At the opening there is a bit of symbolism in the presentation of two flowers, one a hot house plant nourished with tender care, the other a bloom that springs up in a dark alleyway, is trodden under foot but lives despite adverse conditions.

A pampered daughter of wealthy parents is the hot house flower; Mary Pickford is the stray bloom discarded as an infant and knowing no home save the bleak rooms of the asylum where she becomes a leader of the children. Reel after reel of the most laughable interesting as well as pathetic comedy carry us through child life and then comes in one of the most delightful romances between Mary and the unknown benefactor, who sends her to college, and whom she names Daddy Long Legs. The incidents, progress, and ending of this romance are grand far beyond description.

Daddy Long Legs is a picture so thrilling, so appealing to the higher emotions, so true to real life, that it has, perhaps, no equal as an entertainer on the screen. Night after night for weeks in succession thousands have stood in line for hours in the large cities awaiting admission. It is entertaining a new to the old and the young. That this may be an entertainment never to be forgotten the Ideal Theater is going to put on a matinee at 3 o'clock at which every child in the county is especially invited. Ice cream will be served free at the door.

The children are all asked to draw pictures of Daddy Long Legs and bring them with their names, post office address and number of school district written on the sheet. A free ticket to the show will be awarded to the best picture from each school district and the picture name and post office address of the first prize of all published in the Sunday Courier-Journal and a season ticket to all the shows at the Ideal Theater up to November 1st, 1919 presented to the second.

Let no little boy or girl under 12 years of age miss this greatest entertainment of the screen. You will tell it to your children and your grand-children.

LOSING DELIGHT IN BEAUTY

Writer Bemoans "Degradation of the Arts," Which He Asserts is Going on Today.

All the arts but one, says Layton Crippon in his book, "Clay and Fire," show degradation today, in many cases degradation so great that they have virtually ceased to exist. We have not only forgotten how to make beautiful things, but we have even acquired an instinctive dislike of beautiful things. They seem to have become offensive to us.

"There was recently one curious little instance to which I am tempted to refer, showing as it did, that in our present state of degradation beauty is not only ignored, but has actually become offensive, causing instinctive dislike. The St. Gaudens ten and five-dollar gold pieces were undoubtedly the noblest coins produced in any country in 200 years. Within a couple of months the American public had howled them out of circulation. "The explanation was afterward made that the coins were disliked because the relief was inconveniently high, but the original outcry was against the design and only the design of these exquisite examples of die cutting. But America has no monopoly of this instinctive hatred of beauty. It was exemplified in the vandalism that was common all over Europe, the destruction of ancient and glorious buildings, usually without valid excuse."

ONE OF WAR'S GREAT DEEDS

Crossing of St. Quentin Canal by British Troops Conceded to Be Remarkable Exploit.

Probably one of the most remarkable exploits of the war was the crossing of the St. Quentin canal by a brigade of South Stafford and North Stafford (British) troops in the course of the advance on Cambrai. The canal is a landmark in the country for miles around because of its dimensions, and just where the crossing was effected the waterway runs for some distance between very steep and high banks covered in some parts by dense low brushwood. That the crossing was made by such a large number of men and so expeditiously is a remarkable tribute to the determination of the men and to the forethought of their commanders. It is related that their commanding officer had sent down to a channel port and had had sent up to the line for the occasion all the lifeboats of one of the well-known cross-channel steamers. It was this measure of precaution which was the means of enabling many men to cross before foot-bridges could be constructed and which was the main contributing factor in the success of the operation.

Tact Saved the Situation.

The newly created English commissioner in Siberia, Sir Charles Elliot, has served in official capacities in Russia, Turkey, Bulgaria, Serbia, Morocco and the United States. His task in Siberia is a delicate one, but tact is Sir Charles' strong point.

When vice chancellor of Sheffield university Sir Charles created amusement by a remark he made at a university dinner. "Of the changes of the past year," he said, "the one which strikes me most and pleases me most is that every day as I take my walk in the university corridors I see young ladies walking about in gowns." And there he stopped, but the roar of laughter caused him to continue: "In academic gowns, which look most picturesque."

Memory Course.

J. Leonard Replegle, the government's official steel buyer, was an errand boy at fourteen and a millionaire at thirty-five.

"Work is the secret of success," said Mr. Replegle in a Y. M. C. A. address. "I don't take much stock in fads and efficiency courses and so on as success helps."

"A clerk said to me the other day: 'I expect to make a success of my life at last. I'm taking one of these memory courses. It's a magnificent thing.'"

"What's the name of the course?" said I.

"Darned if I can remember the name," said the clerk in a vexed voice."

Non-Combatant Tanks.

Not all army tanks are destructive of human life. Those of the sanitary corps are dangerous only to germs. The necessity of eradicating these from the drinking water of the soldiers has been met by the organization of purification units or mobile water trains. These consist of a number of heavy motor trucks, each of which is a complete filtration plant in itself, including a laboratory for testing. They are equipped to both filter and chemically purify the water, which may be pumped up from a river bed or any convenient source. Attached to each train are a number of simple tank trucks used for storage or transportation of the purified water.

In Memory of French Heroes.

It is believed that with the close of the war the entire line of trenches in France, extending from Alsace to the Belgian border, may be converted into a sort of national sacred forest as a permanent tribute to the memory of the French "Poilus" who died there defending their native soil. A proposition to this effect has been prepared by the general council of the department of the Meuse and will be submitted to not only France, but the entire world.

Johnson Feels Justified in Praising Trutona As Peer of All Tonics

Lexington, Ky., June, 24.—Russell Johnson, 66 years old, a retired furniture dealer and well known Lexington resident of 605 South Lime Stone street, has given Trutona a thorough trial and declares he can conscientiously indorse it as the "best medicine he has ever taken."

"For many years I've been troubled with constipation," Mr. Johnson said. "I constantly had to take a laxative. I would become so dizzy at times that I could hardly rest at night—so bad. . . shrdluc sleep. Headaches bothered me continually."

"Because of the relief I've gained I feel justified in saying that Trutona gave me more benefits than any other medicine I've ever taken. My bowels act with clock-like regularity now; I don't experience the dizzy spells and my appetite is much better than before. I hope others will try Trutona and become convinced of its merits as I have."

Trutona is now being introduced and explained in Hartford at the Ohio County Drug Co. Incorporated Advertisement.

Wake up boys and give your farm a name that your boys and girls will be proud of.
